

[Transcript] Les Grosses Têtes / INÉDIT - Côté coulisse : Stéphane De Groot se confie avant l'émission

So I'm not going to do it, I'm not going to do it.

Okay, okay.

I'm not going to do it.

With success.

With success.

How do you do it in order not to have the big head?

It's funny because we asked me the question not later than earlier.

And I said that in fact, more things go well.

In fact, I think that since it works for me a little, I think I've never had the big head.

But the more it works, the more I follow myself.

Because when we manage to reach, in any case, to caress the dreams that we have to feed, there is no reason to have the big head.

On the contrary, we are centered, we are good, we are strong.

So if we have the big head at this point, we have to take medoc, we have to take treatment, I don't know what.

Is there a particular field in which we can say that you are a big head?

When I come out of the dentist's channel.

You come to the big head to talk to us about your first piece as an author.

Yes.

It's called A Light Doubting, it's played in the theatre of rebirth.

In two words, what does it talk about?

It talks about the perception of things.

Are you really there in front of me to ask me questions?

Are we proof of that?

It's about the time that passes.

You will understand very quickly.

For me, when I start the room, there is no one in the room.

Because for me, the room is finished, I will go back home.

So when I get on stage, I am Stefan de Groot.

And Constance Delet, who is a comedian, who plays my wife, who plays Marie, for her, the room is blinded.

She continues the room and she doesn't understand why I get on stage.

I look for my cigarettes and I go back home.

And so there is this duality between who is right and who has doubts.

Speaking of doubts, are you a man who doubts or are you more sure of yourself?

I hope so.

I hope so until my last breath.

It's a disaster for people who don't doubt.

Because life is just a doubt, we wonder why.

So no, I think it's a doubtful engine.

So we ask ourselves questions.

If we only come with the answers, it's not very interesting.

So thank you Stefan, we find you in a moment, in the big heads like invited today.

[Transcript] Les Grosses Têtes / INÉDIT - Côté coulisse : Stéphane De Groot se confie avant l'émission

With happiness.