Hej, P. Lysold her.

I dag har vi på djæveln i detaljen lanseret en ny lille serie, der hedder Våddragtsmysteriet.

Den findes kun i DR Lyd, så du skal da over for at høre den.

Den lyder sådan her.

The police, they can do a lot of stuff that reporters can't do.

They can force you to give up information, or they can seize your computer and look into it.

If they suspect you have done something wrong, or they need to do it.

But one thing they really can't do is travel to another country to do their work there.

Because then you have to go through the proper channels and you have to send the request to, in this particular case, France.

And my impression was that the French police wasn't really easy to cooperate with.

And if the French police don't want to look into the story, you're kind of stuck.

Because you can't just go to France to investigate if you're a police investigator in Norway or the Netherlands.

But as a reporter you can.

So we can just book a plane ticket and go there and start asking around.
