One night, in late spring of 2006,

a man was startled from sleep by a nightmare in the middle of the night.

There wasn't so much a nightmare with a plot,

but a strongly disconcerting feeling that something was really wrong.

Wide-eyed and covered in sweat,

he sat up and tried to remember the details.

All he could remember was a vague, ghostly silhouette,

echoing the same words over and over.

You'll find her at the fish market.
